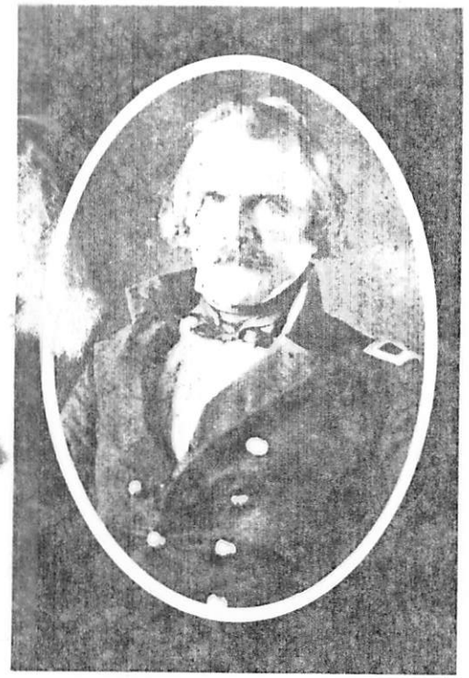
PRESIDENT JAMES BUCHANAN.

President Buchanan was responsible for sending army troops to Utah Territory.



Albert S. Johnston, army commander.

Randolph Marcy, military officer.

GENERAL JOHNSTON.

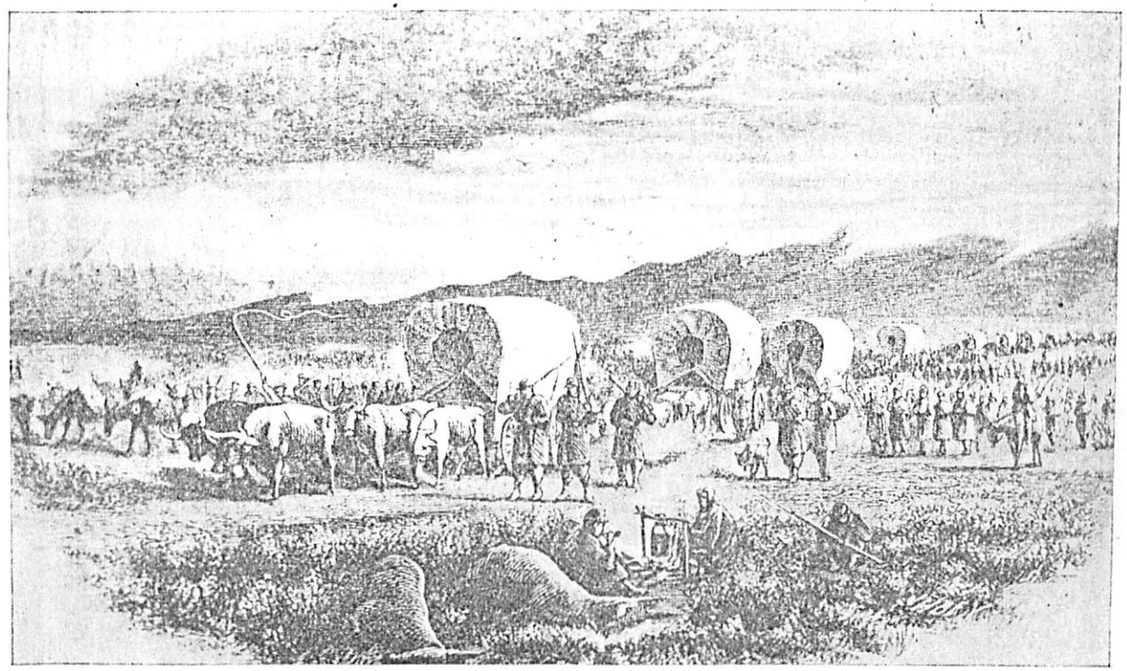
JOHNSTON, ALBERT SIDNEY (1803-1862), was a Confederate general highly regarded by Confederate President Jefferson Davis. In April 1862, he attacked General Ulysses S. Grant's forces at Shiloh, Tenn. Grant held a strong position and commanded more men than Johnston. Yet Johnston drove the Federal troops from their positions and almost won the battle. But he was wounded and bled to death.

Johnston was born in Washington, Ky. He was graduated from the United States Military Academy in 1826. He served in the Black Hawk War and then in Texas in the war for independence from Mexico. He commanded Texas forces in 1837, and was secretary of war for the Republic of Texas from 1838 to 1840. Johnston fought in the Mexican War, and from 1858 to 1860 served in Utah.

FRANK E. VANDIVER

J-121

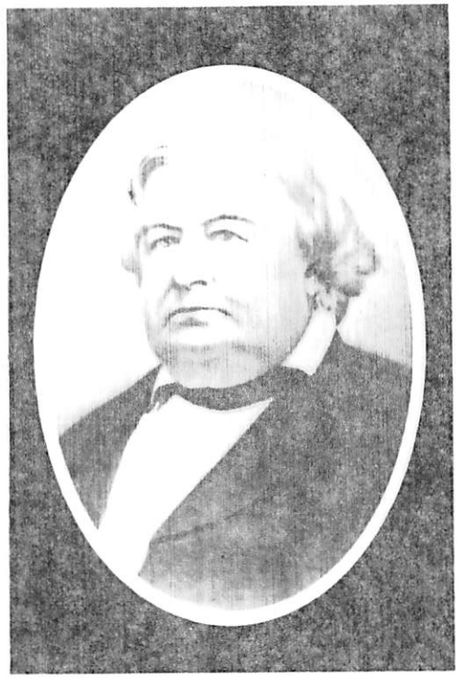
WB-1980
J-121



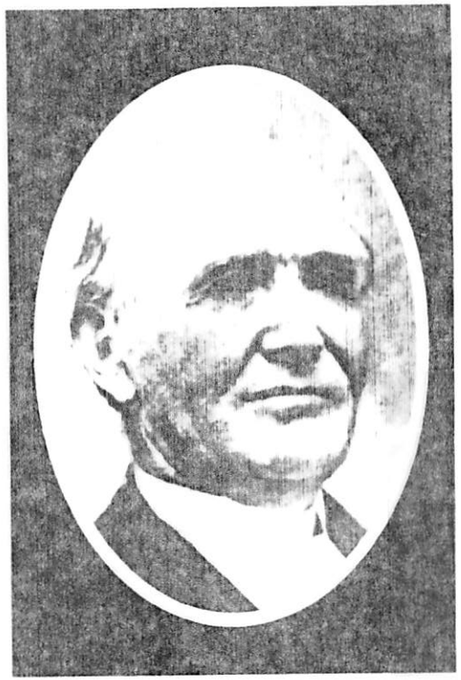
JOHNSTON'S ARMY ARRIVING AT FORT BRIDGER

Courtesy Shepard Book Company, Salt Lake City.

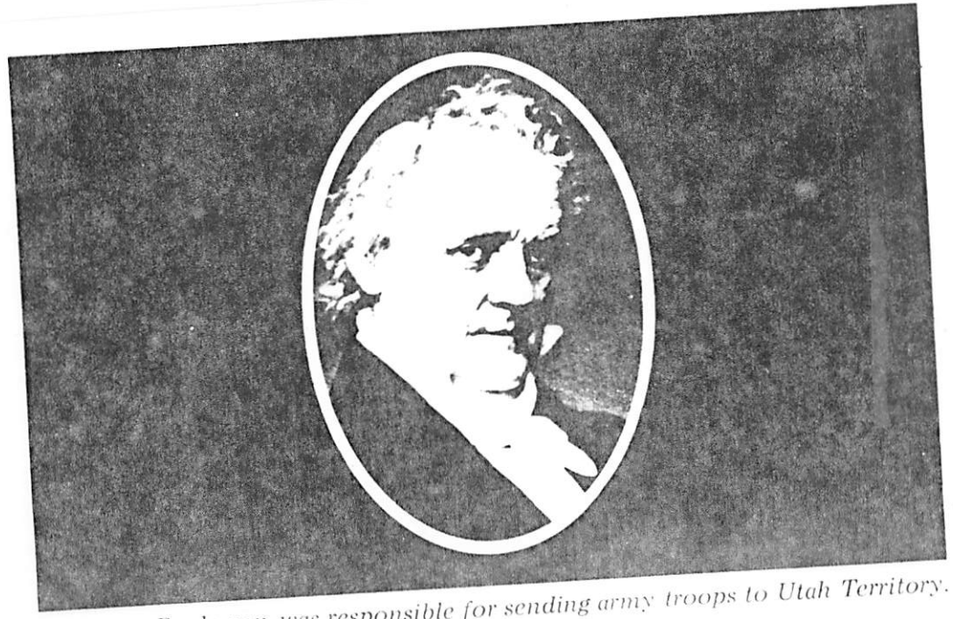
ALFRED CUMMING,
Second Governor of the Territory of Utah, from 1858 to 1861.



Alfred Cumming, Utah governor.



Territorial justice, Delana Eccles.



President Buchanan was responsible for sending army troops to Utah Territory.